February 2008

Raleigh, N.C.

From the tractor

Steve Troxler
Commissioner

I am hopeful that 2008 will be kinder weather-wise to farmers than 2007 was, particularly with regards to rain and getting out of this drought pattern.

As I am writing this in mid-January, a steady rain is falling and parts of the state have received snow. At this point, I'm grateful for moisture in whatever form it arrives.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services has been heavily involved in emergency hay relief efforts and I wanted to update livestock producers and equine owners on those efforts and what they can do if they need hay.

Because of the extreme shortage of hay in North Carolina, the Council of State approved a revolving line of credit of up to $3.5 million to bring hay into North Carolina to ensure producers and owners had access to feed in an emergency. The goals are to keep the cost of hay as low as possible, to avoid an animal welfare crisis and help farmers keep their herds rather than having to sell them in a fire sale.

The first truckloads arrived in the state in late December and additional loads have followed every week since. I can tell you demand has been extremely high. In most cases the hay has barely been unloaded before it was being purchased and transported to farms.

Six distribution sites have been set up across the state. They were selected because of their central location to large numbers of livestock operations and for having storage capabilities. (Sites and contact numbers are listed in the article to the right.)

Hay moving into state; response has been strong

NCDA&CS spearheading emergency hay relief efforts

A few weeks into North Carolina's emergency hay-relief efforts organizers are finding overwhelming demand for feed.

"We knew going into this effort what a serious situation livestock farmers and equine owners faced this winter, and seeing the immediate demand only reinforces the need for these emergency hay efforts," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

"Our farmers are in the same boat as everyone else in the Southeast, which means many people are trying to buy hay outside the region. We are continuing to source hay and arrange for transportation into the state as quickly as we can. This is a top priority for my department."

The hay is coming from as far away as Canada, and is being distributed at six sites across the state. Those sites are: Mountain Research Station, Waynesville, (828) 456-3943; Upper Mountain Research Station, Laurel Springs, (336) 982-2501; Piedmont Research Station, Salisbury, (704) 278-2624; Piedmont Triad Farmers Market, Colfax, (336) 605-9157; Caswell Research Farm, Kinston, (252) 208-3361; and Oxford Tobacco Research Station, Oxford, (919) 693-2483. Sites were selected based on proximity to livestock operations and storage facilities to keep the feed out of the weather.

Livestock producers and equine owners wanting to buy hay should call individual distribution sites and put their names on a waiting list.

Staff at the research station sites will call when the hay arrives. Buyers are limited to four large bales and 20 small bales of hay per day.

Farmers who know they need a whole load of hay should try to source full loads themselves.

NCDA&CS' Hay Alert Web site, www.ncagr.com/hayalert, contains listings of people interested in buying and selling hay. Producers can post wanted or sale ads, and can search the database themselves for feed or transportation. Ads are searchable by county, state and country.

Producers who do not have access to the Internet can call the toll-free hotline at 1-866-506-6222 and an operator will assist them in searching the database. Troxler encourages farmers who need partial loads to join forces with other neighbors in need of hay to make a full load. The Hay Alert Web site also features ads from people looking for others in their area to partner with on a full load.

"Buyers can apply for up to $500 in transportation cost-share funds per load for up to three loads of hay they buy. These cost-share monies will help reduce the cost of the feed and the hay can be delivered directly to the farm," Troxler said. "The Emergency Hay Relief Program is geared towards helping farmers out in an emergency – for example, if their hay order has been delayed for a couple of days due to weather or other circumstances and they need feed."

Golden LEAF grant funds farmers' certifications

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler recently announced the Golden LEAF Foundation has awarded a $60,000 grant to the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services to fund the GLOBAL Good Agricultural Practices certification process for eligible farmers.

GLOBALGAP certification, formerly known as EUREGAP certification, is the standard used to determine if a supplier is qualified to sell to most major European grocery chains. The certification is also used as a base for other export certifications around the world.

"The grant will benefit North Carolina growers who are interested in extending their sales to international markets.

Long term, we expect to see a boost in exports of N.C. agricultural products," Troxler said. "I hope that farmers will apply early to take advantage of this one-time opportunity for free certification."

The 2008 crop-year award is for produce crops. The number of paid certifications is limited. NCDA&CS will begin collecting applications immediately, with a Feb. 29 deadline. Participants will be selected based on a number of factors, including export potential.

"Golden LEAF is pleased to help North Carolina farmers become more competitive in today's global marketplace," said Valeria Lee, president of the Golden LEAF Foundation.

“Providing opportunity for growth is paramount to the success of a competitive agriculture community.”

GLOBALGAP is a different process than the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Good Agricultural Practices certification, meaning USDA GAP-certified farmers are not automatically GLOBALGAP-certified.

The goal of the GLOBALGAP certification project is to provide a competitive edge to North Carolina produce exporters in Europe and other international markets. GLOBALGAP is a certification adopted by a group of European retailers.

Farmers interested in exporting should contact the NCDA&CS to initiate the pre-certification process. A GLOBALGAP auditor will conduct an unofficial audit of the candidate’s operations. The feedback from the audit will help the candidate know what is specifically needed to become GLOBALGAP-certified. All information will remain confidential between the farmer and auditor.

For more information, call Peter Thornton, NCDA&CS assistant director for international marketing, at (919) 733-7912.

NCDA&CS hosts ag risk management workshops

The N.C. Department of Agriculture & Consumer Services Marketing Division will host a series of free risk management workshops for farmers across the state.

The workshops will cover the following topics: Introduction to Grain Hedging; Basis Trading; Cost of Carry; Cotton Futures; and Options Trading on Futures, Equities and Indices.

There will be an emphasis on the principles of options, spreading strategies and using options to manage financial risk. Energy derivatives traded at the New York Mercantile Exchange will be explained, as well as trading strategies to manage your exposure to energy.

All workshops are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. and end at 3 p.m., with an “on your own” lunch break. Following are the dates and locations:

- Tuesday, Feb. 5, Wayne Community College, Dogwood Building, Goldsboro, (919) 735-5151.
- Friday, Feb. 8, Pitt Community College, Leslie Building, Greenville, (252) 321-4200.
- Wednesday, Feb. 13, College of the Albemarle, Small Business Center, Elizabeth City, (252) 335-0821.
- Tuesday, Feb. 19, Halifax Community College, Weldon, (252) 536-7226.
- Wednesday, March 5, Stanly Community College, Locust, (704) 888-8848.
- Friday, March 7, Mitchell Community College, Statesville, (704) 878-3200.

Reminder:

Census of Agriculture deadline is Feb. 4

Farmers urged to take part in Census of Agriculture Deadline for submitting completed forms is Feb. 4

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler is urging farmers to make their voices heard and help shape the future of U.S. agriculture by completing the 2007 Census of Agriculture.

The census is conducted every five years by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is a complete count of the nation’s farms and the people who run them. Census forms, sent out by the USDA’s National Agricultural Statistics Service, have begun arriving in farmers’ mailboxes. The forms will collect data for the 2007 calendar year. Completed forms are due by Feb. 4.

The census looks at land ownership, operator characteristics, production practices, income, expenditures and other topics. It provides the only source of uniform, comprehensive agricultural data for every county in America.

“The census provides information that is not available anywhere else – information that benefits North Carolina farmers and their communities in many ways,” Troxler said. “Policy makers, community planners, companies and farmers all use census data to make a variety of important decisions.”

Producers can return their forms by mail. For the first time, they also have the option of filling out the census online using a secure Web site. Instructions for submitting data online are included with the census form.

For more information about the Census of Agriculture, contact the NASS North Carolina Field Office at (800) 437-8451 or log on to www.agcensus.usda.gov.

Hay relief

We are asking producers to contact the site individually to get on a waiting list for hay. At press time, there is a limit of four large bales and 20 small bales a day per farm. That may change depending on supply and demand.

The department continues to operate the Hay Alert Web site and hotline, both excellent resources for farmers and equine owners looking for hay. The Web site, www.ncagr.com/hayalert, is updated as new information is available, and operators are available Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to take calls at 1-866-506-6222.

Farmers can post ads for hay wanted or hay for sale on the Hay Alert Web site and can search ads for hay for sale. I’d encourage folks who are looking to buy hay to search the database first, because we have found some people do have hay for sale locally and buyers may be to lucky enough to find hay near their farms. This interactive site allows people to search by county or state, as well as Canadian province.

We have been fortunate to have many partners join in efforts to help farmers. Donations by a number of groups have gone into creating the Golden Hay (funded entirely by a $500,000 grant from the Golden LEAF Foundation), Ag Partners and Equine Partners transportation cost-share programs. I am not going to list them all in this column, but I am extremely grateful for their support. We hope others will join this effort because every bit helps, particularly as the cost of hay has risen sharply.

As this drought has drawn on, I have become more and more concerned that this may be the final straw that causes some to sell their land and stop farming altogether.

I sincerely hope that is not the case. North Carolina already leads the country in loss of farms. Our state is changing and folks are starting to realize the downsides to development – overcrowded schools, increased traffic, loss of open spaces and forested land and even the availability of water in drought situations.

Our population now tops 9 million and it is expected to grow to 12 million by 2030.

We need a healthy agriculture industry in this state – to feed ourselves and to feed our growing population.

As I mentioned when I started this column, I hope we get a weather break soon. Recently I heard a presentation from a meteorologist with the National Weather Service. The forecast doesn’t look too good for the first few months of 2008, but it’s still too soon to know what the spring and summer will bring.

Maybe it’s the farmer in me or maybe it’s the rain today, but in spite of the report, I’m still optimistic about the current topsoil moisture levels. Statewide, 70 percent of topsoil moisture is rated as adequate. That certainly gives us cause for hope and something to build on this year.
